

Orlando Business Journal - August 3, 2006

<http://orlando.bizjournals.com/orlando/stories/2006/07/31/daily37.html>

ORLANDO Business Journal

Business Pulse Survey: Should local governments raise impact fees to make up for lost revenue?

Winter Park architects complete design work on Park Towers at Uptown

Orlando Business Journal - August 3, 2006

Slocum Platts Architects P.A. has completed the design work for Park Towers at Uptown in Altamonte Springs' new town center area.

The Uptown Altamonte mixed-use project consists of the pair of 14- and 16-story luxury condominium towers with retail and office space on the lower floors. The two towers will be connected by a porte-cochere on the ground floor, a health club on the second floor and a pool deck on the third floor.

Both towers will be linked to a parking garage through covered bridges, granting easy access to and from the buildings.

More than 230 condos are planned, ranging from one to three bedrooms and priced from $400,000 to more than $1 million. A spacious circular shaped balcony is featured in every residence.

The architectural detail and style of the project flows from the city park where it is located. The design of the ground floor enhances the public space by creating art niches featuring sculpture under the colonnade and art displays at the access corridor, the firm says.

Uptown Altamonte is a joint venture between Unicorp National Developments Inc. and Phoenicia Development LLC, and is being managed by Tom Harb. The sales center has been open since last November, and construction is on track to begin this fall.

Winter Park-based Slocum Platts Architects is an architecture firm specializing in custom residential, multi-family and commercial design.

Contact the Editor Need Assistance? More Latest News →

Subscribe or renew online

All contents of this site © American City Business Journals Inc. All rights reserved.